There are Bullets

There are bullets that bleed through our eyes wrapped in the styrofoam of kings.

We aren’t always as careful as we should be.

There are bullets the size of fists that infest our lungs.

We can forget too easily.

There are bullets like language, lodged in the caverns of our hearts.

I bear in mind.